CASHEN APPOINTED MARSHAL

Prof. William R. Cashen has been appointed Marshal of the University of Alaska. In making this appointment, Dr. Wood explained that they are administrative officers in many American as well as foreign universities. By tradition, the marshal is a senior professor. His duties are to lead commencement processions and other special ceremonials, to represent the school on appropriate and special occasions and to act as campus host to distinguished guests.

Professor Cashen is well qualified to serve as marshal, as he has held many administrative offices in his years with the university. He graduated from the U-A in 1937 and joined the faculty in 1942. He was director of summer sessions from 1950-57, dean of men from 1950-56, dean of students from 1956-58, and has served as director of the National Science Foundation Summer Institute on campus for the past two years.

RICHFIELD OIL SCHOLARSHIP

The Richfield Oil Corp. has, for the second time, presented the $500 Clarence J. Rhode-Richfield Oil Corp. fellowship. In addition, a supplementary grant of $100 has been made to the Wildlife Management Department.

EXPERIMENTAL FARMS OLD

On the yardstick of Alaskan history, the experimental farms are comparatively old, the first one being established at Sitka in 1900. By 1915, there were seven more, at College, Copper Center, Matanuska, Kodiak, Kenai and Rampart. Later, all those except the ones at College and in the Matanuska Valley were disbanded. At the present time, only these two are in operation. For those who are interested in learning more about the history of the farms, Hulley's "History of Alaska" is a good reference.

ACC ANNOUNCES ACHIEVEMENT LIST

Anchorage Community College has announced that 196 students made the outstanding achievement list for the first semester, 1960-61.
