VISITORS ON CAMPUS

The University of Alaska Board of Regents and faculty are hosting a wide variety of activities, starting today, on the farthest north university campus.

The Board of Regents will have it's fall meeting, starting today at 9 a.m. in the Board of Regents room in the Charles E. Bunnell Memorial Building. The group plans to meet through Saturday, according to Elmer Rasmuson, board president. The special committee of the board for campus planning is meeting today.

While the Board of Regents is meeting, the Continuing Education Study Group is preparing recommendations to be presented to the board on Saturday, Oct. 21.

Members of the CESG include Dr. J. Roby Kidd, secretary-treasurer of the Social Science Research Council of Canada and former executive director of the Canadian Adult Education Association, serving as chairman of the CESG; Dr. Lloyd Drury, dean of statewide services at the University of Nevada; Dr. Julius M. Nolte, dean of university extension at the University of Minnesota; and Dr. Paul McGhee, professor of adult education of the University of New York, who joins the group today.

Guests of University President William R. Wood from the National Institute of Health visiting U-A are Dr. Gordon Seger, Chief, Special Programs Review Branch and Dr Dale Lindsay, Chief, Division of Research Grants.

GOVERNOR EGAN TO SPEAK TO ASUA

On Sunday, Oct. 22, the U-A Associated Students will have it's first leadership conference and the featured speaker will be Gov. William A. Egan.

"We are most delighted that the leader of our state is coming to give us the highlights of leadership skills and techniques at our first ASUA leadership conference," Ken Gain, ASUA president said today. Gain also announced the schedule of activities for the day-long program which will be conducted in the Traveler's Inn Banquet Room. The schedule includes four workshops on leadership techniques between 1 and 6 p.m. and the banquet at 7:30 p.m. Conference chairman is Ernie Mueller.

The banquet on Sunday evening is open to the public and an advanced ticket sale is being conducted. Tickets are $4 for students, faculty and others attending. To make reservations, interested individuals can telephone the ASUA office in Constitution Hall, the student union building, ext. 355

"More than 100 campus leaders - presidents of student groups, ASUA council members and ASUA officers - are expected to attend the leadership conference," Gain explained. ASUA officers include: Kenneth Gain, president, of Seldovia; Ronald Rizzi, vice president of Billings, Montana; Patsy Eastland, secretary, of Fairbanks and Robert Anderson, treasurer, of Ft. Wainwright.

Guy Watson is faculty advisor for student activities.
