HEAT WAVE IN FEBRUARY??

The mercury wandered a bit this week on campus, right into the twenties, and the result was immediate: a summer-weight jacket in one office, coatless faculty-staff scurrying among buildings and high hopes that maybe the "heat wave" meant an early spring.

Wiser heads, however, shook those heads sagely and predicted that winter would be with us for a good part of the semester.

Nevertheless, as one faculty member allowed, "it was nice to know that the temperature remembered what the twenties were like."

WILL THEY SHOW THE BOYS UP??

Fans at Friday night's basketball game between the Nanooks and Alaska Methodist University will be treated to an added attraction--- girls! Two teamsful of them.

Prior to the game, the girls will show how basketball is played, their version. Two teams, one composed of freshmen girls and the other of upperclass girls, will clash (uh, mebbe compete) in the season's first surprise sports event.

Women's basketball rules call for six players to a side rather than five. Of the six, two are required to stay in their own backcourt. (Is this where the cooking and laundry is done?)

And oh yes, an innovation this year: rules change permits unlimited dribbling. The old rule permitted only three bounces of the ball at a time and that was it.

The girls will play eight quarters of eight minutes each. Game time will be 6:15 p.m. Terry Tomczak and Enola Eck of the Physical Education Department will serve as referees.

RURAL SCHOOL PROJECT WINS NATIONAL ACCLAIM

The university's new Rural School Project, which got underway last summer, has won national recognition in competition with other universities and colleges throughout the country.

The project was judged one of the top five teacher education programs conducted during 1966 in America. The competition was sponsored by the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

Announcement of the top five winners was made at the association's annual banquet in Chicago. Representing the university were Dr. William R. Wood, president; Dr. Charles K. Ray, dean of the College of Behavioral Sciences and Education; Frank Darnell, executive director of the Rural School Project and Dr. Chester Youngblood, head of the Department of Education.

The other four winners were the University of Georgia, the University of Arizona, Oregon College of Education and Brooklyn College of the City University of New York. Georgia won the top award for an in-service program for elementary mathematics teachers.

ARCH RIVAL VIKINGS HERE THIS WEEKEND

The Alaska Methodist University Vikings, having a tough time of it this season with player shortages and a 0-10 record, move into the Patty Gymnasium Friday and Saturday nights for a pair of contests with the Nanooks.

The weekend bill will wind up the season for both clubs.

Viking Coach Jim Brown will be able to suit up only nine players. Of these, Doug Anderson has a wrenched knee and may not play while three other players have never played varsity basketball before.

The Vikings have lost 12 men since the start of the season through injuries, poor grades and dropouts. Their top scorer is Greg Svendsen of Anchorage who is averaging 22.67 points a game.

The games should decide a two-man scoring race between center Scott Loll and guard Milo Griffin of the Nanooks. Loll leads with an 18.36 average and 349 points while Griffin is right behind with a 17.94 average and 341 points.

EXPERIMENTAL COLLEGE IN SESSION

The Associated Students of the University of Alaska are organizing an experimental college that will offer courses outside the regular university curriculum.

Frank Flavin, ASUA president, has asked for volunteers to teach a class or skill one or two times a week. Prospective teachers should contact Flavin or Greg Snodgrass, public relations director for ASUA, in Room 205 of the Student Union Building.

The college has scheduled its first course---a class in aviation ground school training, taught by Dr. Edmund Skellings.

At San Francisco State College, the latest count showed 650 students out of State's total enrollment of 18,360 taking courses in a student-run experimental college. Of this 650, 240 students actually will receive credit toward graduation from San Francisco State---assuming they're in 27 courses approved by the administration for credit.

THE DAY THE CAMPUS SHOOK, OR, "THAT WAS HOCKEY?"

The first faculty-staff hockey game of the season skated (staggered?) off as scheduled last Friday, to the surprise of the participants, to the curiosity (and amazement) of passersby and to a roar of laughter from spectators in nearby dormitories.

The game was played on the SUB rink, which somehow withstood the impact of falling bodies. An unconfirmed report, circulated after the game, said that three distinct shocks had been recorded on the Coast and Geodetic Survey station instruments.

The contest was in the dark, literally, at the start when the lights went out shortly after the first players arrived.

A quick call to Physical Plant brought a crew on the run (obviously hockey fans) and the lights went back on. The crew explained that an automatic timer had got confused. This was only the beginning of the confusion.

The score of the game? It was 12-7 at the conclusion of 90 minutes of action that could be said to have vaguely resembled hockey. On the winning side were Ted Loder and Dale Buckley of Marine Science and Jurgen Kienle and his wife, Linda, of Geophysical.

The losers (and they were gracious about it) included Jimmy Bedford of Journalism; Mary Hammer of Library; Norman Smith of Mineral Engineering and Don Miller of News Service. Pete McRoy of Marine Science substituted for tired players, which meant he played much of the game.

This week's edition of Hockey Follies will again be staged on the SUB rink. Game time is 5:15 p.m. Friday. Interested (or fascinated) players are urged to bring their own sticks if they have them. Some will be provided.

FOUR-WHEEL DRIVE SCORES AGAIN!

John Eubank of 7 Mile Nenana Highway, will be the first to vote this week for four-wheel drive. The four-wheel drive, that is, on the university Fire Department's new pumper.

The department responded to a fire at Eubank's home last Thursday, and if it hadn't been for four-wheel drive, firemen might not have been able to traverse a snow-clogged road to Eubank's house.

Firemen discovered that a mouse-chewed electrical wire had shorted and started insulation smouldering, filling the house with smoke. Firemen removed the insulation before the smouldering turned to fire.

COMMUNICAR HEADING NORTH

Communicar North, a mobile education information service, will be in the Fairbanks area and on campus February 28 and March 1 to produce a 30-minute film on education in Alaska.

A look at the Rural School Project at the university is tentatively on Communicar's schedule. Communicar is the method used by the Northwest Regional Office of Project Public Information to show how programs in isolated school systems in the Northwest can be publicized.

LANGUAGE CONFERENCE CONVENES

The Alaska Conference on Modern Foreign Languages opened this morning on campus. All sessions will be held in the lounge of Constitution Hall.

A three-day program will include talks by nationally-known experts in foreign languages and a demonstration of the university's language laboratory in the Eielson Building.

The conference will close with a luncheon Saturday at the Travelers Inn in Fairbanks.
