

Heater outlet policies set

Power to automobile heater outlets in university parking lots will be turned on for the winter when the National Weather Service Office records or forecasts a temperature of 10 degrees below zero, Director of Physical Plant Richard V. Moriarity has announced in a recent memo.

Moriarity outlined policy on use of automobile heater outlets in the memo directed to students, faculty and staff.

The university provides electric outlets in many parking lots as a convenience to authorized users. Normal surveillance will be provided to make certain that these outlets are in operating condition, but the university cannot assume obligation on the part of the user to use the outlets correctly.

The outlets may become inoperative by improper use through overloading electric circuits by plugging in more than one vehicle to a specific outlet, or by the use of electric space heaters within the passenger compartment of the car; or through having unsuitable equipment on the vehicle, such as lightweight plastic insulated cords.

In order to prevent inoperative units, only vehicles parked in the specified parking space serviced by the outlet will be permitted to plug into an outlet; electric space heaters or other electrical equipment drawing more than 20 amperes cannot be allowed; and plastic cords or equipment unsuitable for sub-zero temperatures may not be used.

Several parking lots have "duplex outlets," with two places for inserting electric plugs. However, only one vehicle is to be plugged into these outlets. Half of the receptacle has been painted red, to indicate it is not to be used.

Heater outlets have been converted to fuse-stats from the fuses which have been used in the past. Only 20 amp fuse-stats will fit. Replacement fuse-stats will be available at no charge at the following locations: Bunnell Building, Room 19, Security Office; Rasmuson Library, Reader Service Office, David Hales; Hess Commons, Student Housing Office; residence halls, resident advisors; Elvey Building, Jim Parry; Irving Building, Ed Vincent; Patty Building, director's office; and Wood Center, information desk.

Regents to meet Nov. 30

The Board of Regents will hold a regular meeting in Anchorage on Nov. 30 and over the next two days will attend a review of the university's instructional programs and dedication of five Anchorage Community College buildings.

The meeting is to begin at 9 a.m. on Nov. 30 in the new consortium library. The program review is also scheduled there. The dedication is to be held in the afternoon of Dec. 2. All activities are open to the public.

Among those to receive special invitations to the activities are Gov. William A. Egan; Morris Thompson, area director for the federal Bureau of Indian Affairs; members of the State Board of Education and of the board for the State-Operated Schools; John Roderick, mayor of the Greater Anchorage Area Borough and chairman of the University of Alaska, Anchorage Citizens Advisory Committee; Anchorage Mayor George Sullivan; William E. McLaughlin of the U.S. Office of Education; Sen. Robert H. Ziegler, chairman of the Alaska Legislative Council, and members of the council; and members of the Greater Anchorage School Board.

Each year, the regents review one of the university's major program areas. Three years ago the review covered research, two years ago public service, and last year supporting services, including finance and business management. The review is presented by personnel involved in these programs. Its objective is to promote improvement in the various programs of the state university.

This year the review will cover all of the university's instructional programs for associate (two-year), baccalaureate, master's and doctor's degrees. The special guests will be invited to ask questions and offer comments upon completion of the presentation.

The community college buildings to be dedicated are the Eugene Short Building, named for the director of the Anchorage college; the Sally Monserud and Beatrice McDonald buildings, named for long-time faculty members who helped to initiate a number of programs; the Gordon Hartlieb Building, named for the Anchorage banker and long-time supporter of the university who taught business law for 17 years at the college; and the Lucy Cuddy Campus Center, named for the former member of the university's Board of Regents, a resident of Anchorage.

Voters approve bond issue

The University of Alaska construction bond issue was approved by the voters in Tuesday's election. The bond issue, in the amount of $18 million, will finance projects in the university's Northern, Southeastern and Southcentral regions.

Unofficial returns with most precincts reporting placed yes votes at 38,673, approximately 58 per cent of the total, and no votes at 27,484, approximately 42 per cent, for a win by 11,189 votes.

Swim teams raise funds by swimathon

The Arctic Swim Team and University Varsity Team this weekend are sponsoring a "swimathon" as a fund-raising activity. Beginning this afternoon, members of the two teams will swim laps to earn money pledged by university and Fairbanks community residents.

Swimmers on both teams have sought pledges in cents per lap, and will begin swimming at 3 p.m. today. Each swimmer may swim up to 200 laps or for two hours, whichever comes first. Swimmers will be in the pool until it closes at 10 p.m. tonight, and all day Saturday.

At least 80 swimmers are expected to participate, including members of the Arctic Swim Team, from ages 7 to 17; members of the varsity swim team, which this year for the first time includes two women; and several university administrators, including Dr. John Gilmore, head of the Health, Physical Education and Recreation Department, Swim Coach Jim Martin, Director of Student Affairs Robert Hilliard, and Vice President for Academic Affairs Don Theophilus.

Funds collected from the swimathon will be used to send swimmers to national competitions and swim meets outside the state. Gilmore said several swimmers were shaping up to possible competitors on the national level, and funds were needed to allow them to attend national competitions.

The Arctic Swim Team, sponsored by the Division of Statewide Services, is also seeking funds to expand its activities.

Regular pool activities will be continued during the swimathon, with two lanes roped off for swimathon competitors. A busy pool is anticipated, particularly during the regular Arctic Swim Team practice period tonight from 6:30 to 7:30.

Spectators are welcome during the swimathon. Anyone wishing to pledge money to a particular swimmer or in general may do so by phoning the Physical Education Department at 479-7205.

The swimathon has been organized by varsity coach Jim Martin and Arctic Swim Team coach Judy Walker.

Reading teachers meet

Alaska's reading teachers, specialists and curriculum supervisors convened this week on the university campus here for a workshop in reading instruction.

Sponsored by the State Department of Education and the university, the statewide Tutor Training Workshop was held Wednesday and Thursday. It was conducted by the National Reading Center as part of the National "Right to Read" program.

The program was coordinated by Mrs. Winifred Lande, chairman of the State Planning Committee for Reading Tutor Training, and Dr. W.K. Pennebaker, both of the University of Alaska; and Mrs. Jean Harlow, state language arts consultant of the Department of Education. Other members of the planning committee include Mildred Wenger, elementary education director of the Fairbanks North Star Borough School District; Martha Steckman of the State-Operated Schools Language Development Project; and Eva M. Kreiger, BIA education specialist. The committee has been working with Dr. Jack Hedfrich of the National Reading Center office in Washington, D.C.

Teachers from all Alaska school districts and from state-operated, BIA, and private schools attended.

The major purpose of the workshop was to prepare reading teachers for training classroom aides and tutors. Participants received instruction and materials to enable them to return to their communities and conduct similar sessions for all staff working with children who are having reading difficulties. Workshop materials have been developed by the National Reading Center under USOE funding.

POTPOURRI

The Division of Statewide Services is still seeking responses from those interested in a study abroad program next summer. If a sufficient level of interest is established, educational travel courses will be set up to 10 European countries, Russia and the British Isles, to study art, philosophy, languages, history, education, anthropology, geology and literature. Interested persons should call or write Mrs. Judith Strohmaier, Box 95204, University of Alaska, 479-7221.

KUAC FM and TV this week had a distinguished visitor, Robert D. Wood, president of the CBS Television Network. Wood toured KUAC facilities, and the campus, with Augie Heibert of Northern Television in Anchorage. He was here last Monday.

Another distinguished visitor to campus recently was Mrs. Reine Chaupin of the Vision Nouvelle Galerie in Paris, France. Mrs. Chaupin, guest of Dr. Mildred Matthews, owns several galleries in Paris, and represents 13 artists. She was on her first trip to Alaska, and was also to visit Canada and 27 other United States cities. While here, she viewed lithographs by Fred Machetanz, visited with Rusty Heurlin, and spent much time visiting with faculty and students at the Art Department.

Dr. Timothy Tilsworth, assistant professor of environmental health engineering, was in Yakima, Washington Oct. 30 for a conference of the Pacific Northwest Council of the American Society of Civil Engineers. The one-day meeting focused on exchange of ideas, information and experience among the officers from the western states. Tilsworth is president of the Alaska Section of the ASCE.

The Physical Plant Safety Committee sends the following words of warning to campus residents who keep cars in garages: watch gas station attendants to assure that they do not completely fill your gas tank in cold weather. Garages on campus are warm enough to cause the gas to expand, overflow and create fumes which may spread to one or more housing units.

The first bi-annual convention of the Alaska Council of Teachers of English was held in Fairbanks on Oct. 20 and 21, and included presentations by two university faculty members. Dr. June Duncan, associate professor of English, was the main speaker at the convention, speaking on "Alternative Relevance: An Acceptance of Ambiguous Man" at the Friday night banquet. Dr. Duncan also spoke to a discussion group concerned with literature of the sixties and seventies on "The Absured and Beyond." Dr. John Bernet, associate professor of English, spoke to a discussion group concerned with teaching native literature in Alaska on "Alaska Native Literature in the College and University." Members of the council include English teachers in Alaskan public schools, and University of Alaska senior and community colleges.

Filmasia this weekend will present a double feature. "Seven Samurai," in Japanese with English subtitles, will be shown at 7 p.m. The film has received a number of awards at international film festivals, including the "Lion of St. Mark" award at the 1952 Venice International Film Festival. The second film, to be shown at 9 p.m., is "Damsel from Kashmir," in Hindi with no subtitles. Both will be shown in Duckering 318. Admission is $1 for adults, 50 cents for students, and children free.

Beginning next week, the Polar Star will be published on Tuesdays, rather than Fridays, and open distribution will no longer be in effect. Students will receive free copies of the paper Tuesday afternoon and evening at Wood Center, Hess Commons and the Lower Commons. Others may purchase copies for 15 cents at Wood Center, the book store, and downtown. Subscriptions are still available for faculty and staff at $3 per year. These copies will be delivered through the campus mail. No Polar Star will be published this week.

University of Alaska archivist Paul H. McCarthy was elected president of the Alaska Historical Society at the organization's annual meeting at Whitehorse, Y.T. Nov. 3-6. He succeeds Richard Montague of Juneau, editor of "The Milepost." The Yukon Territory and City of Whitehorse were hosts at two receptions for the society. A returning Fairbanks member rated the hospitality outstanding. The society took a day to visit Skagway via the famed White Pass & Yukon Railroad.

The first annual Fairbanks Youth Fair is scheduled for tomorrow, from noon to 6 p.m. at the Alaskaland Civic Center. Youngsters from kindergarten to high school age planning to submit entries should take them to the Civic Center Saturday morning between 8:30 and 10 a.m. Youngsters under 18 will be admitted free to the fair. Admission for adults is 50 cents.

Barbara R. Perles, assistant professor of mathematics, has been selected for inclusion in the annual publication "Who's Who of American Women." Now a teacher in the SOS program, Prof. Perles came to UA from Bentley College in Waltham, Massachusetts. She holds a bachelor of arts degree from Boston University, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary society, and Phi Sigma Sigma, national service fraternity. She received her master of science degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology through an institute fellowship, and is presently a doctoral candidate at Boston College. She was named one of 1971's Outstanding Educators of America, and has been involved in a number of community projects since coming to Fairbanks.

Pitney named coach of UA rifle team

Randy Pitney, honorable mention All-American shooter in 1970, is the new coach of the University of Alaska's men and women's small-bore rifle team.

Announcement of the appointment came from Dr. John C. Gilmore, head of the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

The university rifle team has been practicing for several weeks and looks forward to intercollegiate competition in the spring.

Pitney hopes the team can make at least three trips outside to major invitational matches but stresses that travel plans remain to be worked out.

In the interim, the university team will take part in local competition and possibly travel to Anchorage for several matches, he said.

"There's a lot of talent at the university right now," he said. "We want to bring up new people as well as draw in old competitors."

A 1972 graduate of the university in wildlife management, Pitney is working at present in the construction industry. His coaching assignment is part-time but he hopes it can become full-time in the future.

He is a member of the Tanana Valley Sportsmen's Association's Rifle and Pistol Club and of the Alaska Rifle and Pistol Association.

Concert set for Nov. 17

Two outstanding groups of performing artists will present a joint concert on the university campus next Friday, Nov. 17.

Featured will be the University Chamber Singers, under the direction of Dr. Greeta Brown, associate professor of music, and the Ketchikan Theater Ballet, under the direction of Virginia Klepser. The concert will be performed at 8 p.m. in the Regents' Great Hall. There is no admission charge.

Dr. Brown will direct the Chamber Singers in a selection of romantic Renaissance songs accompanied by instruments of the period, recorders and the viol da gamba.

The Ketchikan Theater Ballet is currently on an Arctic Tour, in cooperation with the National Endowment for the Arts and the Alaska State Council on the Arts. Arrangements for the Fairbanks performance are being handled in conjunction with the Alaska Association for the Arts.

There are eight dancers in the Ketchikan ballet touring company. They will perform the "Danse Macabre" by Saint-Saens; "Spirit of Raven" by Greeta Brown; and "The Flood" by Debussy.
